Updates

- More than half a million meals have now been served by The Salvation Army to people who have been displaced or have had their homes damaged by Hurricane Irma in south-eastern states. On September 14, The Salvation Army in Canada deployed 10 members of its emergency disaster personnel to lead an incident command team in Florida. The Canadian team will provide assistance with food and hydration services, emotional and spiritual care, and crisis intervention. This is in addition to TSA's ongoing emergency response in many of the Caribbean islands and in reaction to Hurricane Harvey in Texas.
- THE Salvation Army in Mexico is responding to disasters on two fronts, with people being affected by hurricane damage in the north and a huge earthquake - followed by threat of tsunami - just off the southern coast. Two canteens and a team of nine officers and cadets hope to reach the region on Monday but progress is being hampered by landslides and bridge damage caused by the earthquake. Shortly after the earthquake struck, Hurricane Katia hit the coast near Veracruz. In readiness, The Salvation Army had sent two canteens and two support vehicles to the region, along with the Divisional Coordinator of Emergencies from South East Division and a team of eight officers and soldiers. The Salvation Army was assigned by the authorities to provide food to displaced people in Tecolutla.
